

iVillage Entertainment

- Video
- Boards

Going Once, Going Twice! Wacky Celebrity Artifacts 4 Chimes

From Michael Jackson's glove to Madonna's love letters, see the star items that have brought in top dollar

Photo 1 of 9

Michael Jackson's Glove

The late King of Pop wore this glove during The Jacksons' 1984 Victory tour, which only means one thing: big bucks. Sold for $66,000 by auction house Profiles in History, the winning bidder can now Moonwalk with the illuminating white glove, equipped with 50 small lights powered by a single 9-volt battery and adorned by Austrian crystal rhinestones. Known as the most iconic piece of Michael Jackson memorabilia, the glove was designed in 1984 by Ted Shell of Ted Shell Designs.

Previous

Next

Profiles in History

Photo 9 of 9

Amelia Earhart's Flight Goggles

As the biopic Amelia (starring Hilary Swank) soars across theaters nationwide, you'll notice one item the real Amelia Earhart couldn't live without: her specs. A pair of the aviator's flight goggles sold at a Profiles in History auction for $141,600. Yes, you read that right. She wore the pair during her historic 1932 solo transatlantic flight -- when she became the second person to cross the Atlantic by herself and the first woman to do it, we might add. Go girl!

- Filed Under:
- Amelia Earhart,